School mathematics is the mathematics of rational numbers. Any excursion into irrational numbers depends on FASM. The use of FASM in school mathematics is good engineering provided it is made explicit (the precision of mathematics). The fact that FASM is never mentioned in textbooks in schools or in college textbooks for teachers is POOR engineering.

This is something new in the world. Mathematics has not always loomed so large in the education of the rising generation. There is no telling how many children in ancient Egypt and Babylon received training in numbers, but there were not many. Of course, in ancient civilizations education was not for everyone, much less mathematical education.
